PRICE THREE CENTS

SEMINARY GETS $217,951 UNDER CRONHARDT WILL

Baltimorean Establishes Memorial to Parents by Legacy.

CHURCH FOUNDER WILL BE HONORED

Dr. John Aberly today announced that executors of the will of Charles Cronhardt, Jr., who died in Baltimore, March 9, 1934, have paid to the Lutheran theological seminary here $224,722.50 as the school's share of Mr. Cronhardt's estate.

After attorneys' fees and other expenses incidental to the transfer, totaling $6,771.01, were deducted, the residue for the local ministerial school was $217,951.49, the seminary president said.

Part of the late Mr. Cronhardt's estate remains to be liquidated, and officials at the seminary expect that the school's share may eventually reach $250,000.

Honors His Parents

By provisions of the will of Mr. Cronhardt, for many years a Baltimore hardware merchant, the Lutheran theological seminary here was to receive one-half of his estate, but not to exceed $450,000.

Mr. Cronhardt's will provided that the money is to be kept in a separate fund to be known as the "Charles Cronhardt and Susan Cronhardt, his wife, of Baltimore, Maryland, Fund" as a memorial to the Baltimorean's parents.

Pictures of Mr. Cronhardt's parents are now on display at the seminary.

Martin Luther Statue

By another provision of the will, part of the income from the legacy will be used for the erection on the seminary grounds of an appropriate statue of Martin Luther, similar to that opposite Luther Place Memorial church, Thomas Circle, Washington, D. C.

Although shrinkage in the securities of Mr. Cronhardt's estate prevented the seminary from receiving the full $450,000, Dr. Aberly pointed out that the bequest is the largest in the history of the seminary.

Hopes To Build Chapel

Dr. Aberly said he hopes eventually part of the income from the estate will be used for the erection of a Cronhardt memorial chapel on the seminary campus. "The Martin Luther statue without the chapel would seem like a picture without the frame," Dr. Aberly said.

Before his death, Mr. Cronhardt was not known at the seminary, and the unusually large bequest stunned seminary officials when they first learned about it from newspaper stories.

1863--Lincoln at Gettysburg--1935

Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here; but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that the government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

—Lincoln at Gettysburg, November 19, 1863.

Twenty Valuable Merchandise Prizes Are Awarded at Initial Drawing in "Better Business Campaign", Monday

MERCHANTS AND CUSTOMERS ARE ELATED WITH SUCCESS OF BUSINESS ENTERPRISE.

Twenty residents of Gettysburg and Adams county are happy citizens today and more than 70 participating merchants in Gettysburg's first "BETTER BUSINESS CAMPAIGN" are jubilant over the results of the first five days of the campaign, which will conclude Saturday, December 14.

The first drawings for twenty of the 80 merchandise awards, the total value of which is in excess of $300, took place Monday evening in the Hotel Gettysburg following a long parade through the main streets of Gettysburg.

The seventy-two participating merchants began pouring in the coupons, given for each dollar purchase at his or her place of business, in the huge mixing machine at the annex.

Audience Is Interested

Boxes, bags and various other receptacles, used by the merchants as depositories for coupons, were carried into the annex by merchants and emptied into the mixing machine preparatory to the initial drawing.

A large crowd of men and women watched eagerly as preparations were made for the drawing.

Then the huge mixer was whirled and whirled, thoroughly mixing all the coupons.

Then little Miss Mary Elizabeth Rose, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rose, Baltimore street, was called to the platform to draw the twenty lucky numbers.

As each coupon was pulled from the huge mixer the name of the lucky holder was announced, together with the merchandise prize awarded and the merchant donating the gift.

Keep Prizes On Display

The holders of the twenty lucky numbers will receive certificates entitling them to the prize drawn. The awards will remain on display in the bank building, Baltimore street, until Monday evening, December 16, at which time they will be given out to those holding the lucky numbers.

Not one expression of dissatisfaction was heard from any merchant participating in the "BETTER BUSINESS CAMPAIGN." Everyone who had any comment to make said it was "the most successful business enterprise undertaken in Gettysburg in many many years."

Patrons, too, were pleased. They (Continued on Page Two)

CONSTRUCTION OF 3 DAMS AS WORK PROJECTS

County Commissioners Agree to Submit Plans After Hearing Pleas.

The Adams county commissioners this morning agreed to submit as works' progress administration projects the reconstruction of Hartman's, Geiselman's and Nary's dams.

The request that the commissioners act as sponsors of the projects was made by Frank E. Seacrist and Moses Bair, both members of the Adams county fish and game association.

Seacrist and Bair assured the commissioners that they would assume no liability for expenses in connection with the construction of the three dams. The cost of the materials will be borne by the fish and game association, the spokesmen said.

Hartman's dam is on Big Marsh Creek near Hilltown; Geiselman's dam, on Rock Creek at Barlow, and Nary's dam on Little Marsh Creek, above Orrtanna.

The fish and game association spokesmen said their organization is not eligible to submit WPA projects, and it would be necessary for the commissioners to assume that duty. The board agreed to submit the project, provided the fish and game association will assure it in writing that the commissioners assume no liability for any expenses.

Seacrist and Bair said the cost of reconstructing the dams has not yet been determined. Rip-rap dams are planned at the three places.

Martial Music, Marching Feet and Displays Mark Business Procession Here

Bands and banners, martial music, apparatus. The apparatus of the marching feet and fleets of trucks and automobiles featured the "BETTER BUSINESS CAMPAIGN" parade in Gettysburg, Monday evening.

The parade was held by the 72 Gettysburg and Adams county merchants participating in the first "BETTER BUSINESS CAMPAIGN" to arouse interest in the first of the four weekly drawings for merchandise and cash prizes.

That the parade attracted considerable attention and drew to Gettysburg residents of almost every section of Adams county was evidenced by the crowds in center square and along the streets over which the procession passed.

Two Bands Play Under the marshaling of A. B. Plank, the parade formed on Springs avenue, and moved promptly at 7:30 o'clock. At the head of the column was a large banner calling attention to the "BETTER BUSINESS CAMPAIGN" which got under way in Gettysburg and Adams county last Wednesday, and to the $800 worth of merchandise and cash prizes to be awarded.

Swinging along behind the stirring airs of the Blue and Gray band of Gettysburg were many members of the Gettysburg fire company, together with the local fire company's apparatus.

The head of the second section was the Gettysburg college band. Then followed several hundred khaki-clad members of the college R. O. T. C. unit under command of Colonel E. H. Bertram and Major George E. Abrams.

Behind the military students were fleets of trucks and automobiles, entered by merchants and businessmen participating in the "BETTER BUSINESS CAMPAIGN." This particular section of the parade was the largest ever seen in Gettysburg.

Furniture Displays Gettysburg's three furniture factories had several trucks in line with displays of dining room and bedroom suites.

The parade moved to Chambersburg street, to York street, to Liberty street, to East Middle street, to South Stratton street, to East High street, to Baltimore street, to Carlisle street and disbanded at the Hotel Gettysburg annex where the first drawings for 20 merchandise awards in the "BETTER BUSINESS CAMPAIGN" were held.

Merchants in the "BETTER BUSINESS CAMPAIGN" today expressed their thanks to the bands and to the marchers and others for turning out and making the parade a success.

Just One Wish for Christmas

"May men and nations, seeing once more incarnate in a manger the spirit of love and righteousness which alone can elevate mankind, resolve to do justly and love mercy and to learn again the fear of the Lord which is the beginning of wisdom."

NEW SHERIFF TO GET $3,000 YEAR SALARY

Act of Legislature Eliminates Fees and Other Compensations Here.

COUNTY TO PAY FOR DEPUTIES

When Sheriff-elect B. W. Spence, of Highland township, takes office the first Monday in January, 1936, he will serve on a salary instead of a fee basis.

His salary, fixed by an act of the state legislature in 1933, will be $3,000 a year. Although the act went into effect March 17, 1933, its provisions did not affect the incumbent, Sheriff John C. Wible during his current term.

Besides his salary, the new sheriff will be entitled to expenses incurred in the performance of his duties, but will not be eligible for any additional fees or compensation for the care and maintenance of prisoners.

As a result of the new act, affecting seventh class counties, such as Adams, the position of sheriff drops from one of the most lucrative in the county's government to one of the minor positions.

Was Lucrative Post In past years, sheriffs have been known to collect from fees and other compensation between $4,000 and $8,000 a year, out of which they were obliged to pay for the expenses of their deputies.

Under the new act, the sheriff is authorized to appoint one or more deputies as may be deemed necessary for the performance of the duties of his office, but the salaries in such deputies is fixed by a salary board, comprising the county commissioners and the sheriff.

In the event, the sheriff is dissatisfied with the salary set for his deputies by the salary board, he can appeal to the court of common pleas, whose decision as to the number of deputies and their salaries will be final.

Must Keep Books

As a result of the new legislation, the sheriff becomes a "glorified bookkeeper" inasmuch as he must keep accurate records of all money collected and spent and chargeable against his office. On the first of every month, the sheriff must turn over to the county treasurer all (Continued on Page Two)

COUNCIL WILL OPEN STREET, ALLEY IN TOWN

Two Ordinances Are Adopted at Adjourned Meeting of Council on Monday.

NO OBJECTIONS TO OTHER PLANS

Two ordinances, one establishing and opening a street, and the other an alley, were passed at an adjourned meeting of council, Monday evening. C. Ray Rupp, president of council, presided.

The new street, known as Elm street, extends from the south property line of Buford avenue northward to the west property line of Hayes street. At a recent council session, the Lutheran theological seminary offered some of its land for the opening of the new street, formerly known as "Seminary path."

The new street will have a uniform width of 50 feet.

Ordain Alley

The alley which council ordained extends from the north side of the public alley north of Stevens street north to the south side of the public alley south of East Lincoln avenue. The new alley, which will be 12 feet wide, will be known as Stallsmith alley.

Notices of the ordaining of the new street and alley will be given by newspaper advertisement and posting and unless objections are filed, both thoroughfares will be opened in a month when the ordinances come up for final passage.

Monday evening's meeting was called primarily to hear objections to the extension of East Lincoln avenue, Water street and Fourth street, ordinances to ordain the extensions having been passed at the regular November session. However, none appeared in opposition to the extension of the three streets. The ordinances will be up for final passage at the December meeting.

Post Affidavits

Affidavits of the posting of the three streets by Officer C. M. Spence ten days before the Monday evening session were placed on the minutes.

Besides President Rupp, other members of council in attendance were D. C. Stallsmith, Charles T. Jacobs, Emory C. Williams and John E. Newman.

STOCK REPORT

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—Wall Street viewed the stock market—perched on the highest pinnacle in four years—with a trace of uneasiness today.

Prices continued to push up here and there, but buying was unusually selective, and many of the recent leaders, notably in steels and motors, were all but neglected.

Among shares up 1 to 2 points were American Telephone, at a recovery peak; American Can, duPont, Westinghouse, Schenley, Pullman and others.

COUNT CIANO IS SHOT DOWN

Son-in-law of Mussolini Is Felled by Ethiopians in Aerial Attack.

(By The Associated Press)

Emperor Haile Selassie took off from Addis Ababa by airplane for an unannounced destination today.

The emperor's plane, with an escort of two smaller planes, took off just before sunrise. Application of sanctions against Italy by 51 nations of the world in accordance with the league's action was the signal for an Italian aerial attack on the Ethiopian forces on the northern front which the fliers said resulted in 2,000 deaths among the native warriors.

A squadron of 20 planes led by Il Duce's son-in-law, Count Galeazzo Ciano, engaged in a machine gun and bomb battle with the army of Haile Selassie just south of Makale.

The Ethiopians brought down the plane of Ciano who escaped unhurt. Before landing, Ciano, directed a double attack which, Italian officers said, led to the dispersal of 15,000 Ethiopians and gave the Fascist troops one of the most important victories of the conflict.

Mussolini's two sons, Bruno and Vittorio, took part in the attack.

Emperor Haile Selassie, before joining his subjects at the front, expressed doubts as to the efficacy of the sanctions. The ruler of the African empire said that, while grateful for the imposition of the restrictions by the 51 nations, he felt hostilities never would have begun if such measures were of a force to prevent war.

Alarm System Worries Firemen

Members of the New Oxford fire company are about convinced that they should abandon their new electric alarm to wayfarers who insist upon using it to announce their intention of accepting the fire engine house as a hostelry for the night.

Last Friday evening at about 6 o'clock, members of the volunteer organization were called from their dinners by the sounding of the siren. The alarm continued to sound without interruption, seeming to stress the urgency of the situation.

When the first group arrived they found the engine house dark and lacking the presence of the individual responsible for the call. However, it was soon discovered that a mistake of several weeks ago had been repeated. A wayfarer had found the prospect of a night in the engine house more pleasant to one on the open road and had mistaken the switch connected to the siren for that of the light he evidently wanted.

The traveler committing the error a few weeks ago immediately turned the switch to its former position, while the second visitor was either too frightened or entirely unaware of his being involved to shut it off.

It is evident that the company at its December meeting will have something to discuss other than the impending nomination of officers.

IMPORTANCE OF LOVE SOUNDED BY REV. CRANE

Bible Is Predominately a Message of Love Says Gettysburg Pastor.

TEXT FROM CORINTHIANS

"The Greatest of These is Love," was the theme of the sermon delivered Sunday morning by the Rev. Frederick B. Crane, pastor of the Presbyterian church. The text was taken from 1 Corinthians 13:13: "And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love."

The sermon, in part, follows: "The Bible, someone has said, is God's love letter to mankind. It is sent forth into a world in which men love themselves, power, possessions, pleasures and applause, to woo men unto their Heavenly Father. It is predominately a message of love, God's love for men manifested most graphically and most forcibly in the gift of His Son to the world—a gift which culminated in Christ's Calvary experience. If this will not win men's affection, and warm cold hearts then nothing will. It is the supreme expression of love divine all loves excellent."

Message of Love

"The Bible is not only a message of love it is a message about love and no passage is of more practical significance than Paul's magnificent hymn of love. He wrote this to the Corinthians because the people of that Church were engaged in bitter controversy. Jealousy and pride were bearing their vicious fruitage there. His smarting rebuke included this message about love. Here he says three things, namely, that love is the most important thing in the world, that we must study to give expression to the love we feel, and that love is eternal."

"Love is more important than eloquence. Eloquence without love is mere noise. It is more important than prophecy, or the understanding of mysteries, or knowledge. It is more important than faith, for faith is the means to the end love, and the end is always of greater significance than the means. It is more important than charity or sacrifice, either is of no profit without love. It is the most important thing in the world."

"We must study to find channels of expression for the love we feel so that God and men may know that we love them. In his analysis of love Paul directs us to these media of expression. Love for example is patience—it suffers long, bearing, believing, hoping and enduring all things. Love is kind. Love is generous, it never motivates envy. Love is humble, and courteous. Love is unselfish, it 'seeketh not her own,' that is, love ignores its rights in the favor of others. Love is good tempered, it is guileless, it 'thinketh no evil,' and love is sincere. When love reigns in a human heart then these graces are an accomplished fact."

"Finally Paul declares that love is eternal. It never faileth. Prophecies fail, because they are fulfilled. Tongues cease, and are still. Knowledge vanishes. But love endures forever."

"The Bible is the Book of love. It tells man that God loves him. And in this chapter we are taught that love is most important, that there are nine ways in which love may manifest itself, and that love is eternal."

"The conclusion is an appeal. Let us love God with all our hearts and souls and strength and minds, and let us love our fellow men."

Recent sheriffs of Adams county have had two deputies to assist them with their duties, and it is likely that Sheriff-elect Spence will ask that the same number be maintained. The new county officer has not as yet named his deputies.

A report that the incoming sheriff would not have to live at the jail, but would appoint a chief warden to reside there is erroneous, as the act of 1933 does not specify any change in the residence of the sheriff but at the jail.

HIGH COURAGE

by Jeanne Bowman.

SYNOPSIS: With dramatic suddenness, Anne Farnsworth, oldest and best friend, bursts into the midst of her trial for the murder of her foster uncle, Lee Farnsworth, and takes complete charge of her defense. Anne's freedom and good name depend on the outcome of the trial. Even her fortune hangs on the same peg. Now Judge Kellogg is proving by the former Farnsworth butler that Anne did not have the weapon which killed Farnsworth in her possession at the time of the shooting.

Chapter 40

BOMBSHELL

"The family of the late Luke Farnsworth, sir. I worked for him for fifteen years."

"Then you know the defendant in this case?"

"I do sir, and a finer little lady."

"I understand and agree," interrupted Kellogg laughing. "Buttons, when did you leave the Farnsworth home?"

"As soon as those people made it so uncomfortable Miss Anne had to leave. None of us would stay on, sir."

"How soon after she left did you leave?"

"The next day, sir, March eleventh it was, sir."

Judge Kellogg turned to Lenholm, then to the clerk of the court and asked for exhibit A. With the revolver in his hand he showed it to the witness. "Have you ever seen this weapon before?"

"Yes sir," declared the man emphatically, "many times, sir. Mr. Luke always kept that in his room, in the bottom drawer of his chiffonier where he kept his pajamas."

"When did you last see this revolver?" Kellogg went on.

"The day after Miss Anne left, sir," said Jones. "We were that worried over her going away by herself, that we got thinking would she do away with herself, having been treated so bad. I went upstairs and looked for the revolver, the only firearm in the house. It was still there."

"Did you at any time touch it, disturb it, take it away, send it to Miss Farnsworth, or to your knowledge did any of the other servants send it to her?"

"No sir we did not. We didn't know where to reach her had we ever thought of it."

"That will be all."

The next witness was a Mrs. J. C. Irving, whom Anne identified as the woman at the service station located near the foot of the Clatsop Ridge grade. She told of seeing Anne, on the night of March tenth. She had been a "talkative nunny," telling the young lady about the spot on the ridge where the Farnsworth car had gone over the cliff, and that not until a young man had told her who the girl was, had she realized she had been talking to Anne Farnsworth.

"That will be all," droned Ansel Kellogg. "Call John Neuman."

John Neuman. Anne's heart seemed to stand still. John Neuman. Then he was here. How had the judge found him? Or had he found the judge?

He strode into the court room, sat down. He looked at Anne, smiled at her, and in the love and kindness of that smile she found her whole world righted. How handsome and clean-cut he looked. How different from Rob Crocker. No lines of selfishness no—but the judge was questioning him.

"Yes, I know Anne Farnsworth," he declared, and enumerated the times he had met her prior to the night on Clatsop ridge.

"Are you in a position to say whether or not she has returned to Portland since that time?"

"I know she has not and can call any number of witnesses to prove this."

He then corroborated Anne's testimony concerning her reason for being at the fishtrap the night of the murder, concluding with an explanation of her landing at the far end of town.

"I knew Miss Farnsworth had never been treated fairly by the remaining members of her family and I knew that should she be found near the scene of the shooting, she would be involved. Therefore, I told the Sorki boys to take her somewhere along the beach and let her make her way back into town from there."

"Your honor, and gentlemen of the jury," said Ansel Kellogg at the conclusion of John's testimony. "I have attempted to prove through these witnesses that the gun which fired the shot that killed Lee Farnsworth was never in the possession of the defendant."

"I will now prove that it has been in the custody of another person. I will call Jake Sampson."

There was a commotion at the door, then two deputies appeared, a small man between them. He was forced to his place on the stand and sworn in.

"Your name," snapped Kellogg. "J-J-Jake, J-Jake Sampson," answered the man, his gaze seeking the ceiling as if there was someone in the courtroom he did not wish to see.

"Your occupation?"

"Gunsmith."

"Have you a store, if so what do you sell?"

"Everything to do with shooting; shells, guns, cartridges, good stock." He was boasting now, becoming confident he wouldn't be hurt.

"Then I clean guns and—"

"Ever see this before?"

Judge Kellogg thrust exhibit A towards him.

"Betcha life I have. I sold that to Luke way back in 1919, it's a peach—"

"Just a minute Mr. Sampson, we're not questioning your wares?"

Jake Sampson wet his lips nervously. "Y-yes," he stammered.

"When?"

"Evening of August 3rd a man brought it in to be cleaned and oiled. He called back for it and I sold him some cartridges for it. Thirty-two automatic."

"Is that man in this court room?" asked Kellogg.

There was a moment of tense silence then. "Yes," the voice came faintly, "over there." He pointed towards the group at the district attorney's table. Seated there was Rob Crocker and Tom Farley.

Anne sat frozen, incredulous. Intent upon her own innocence, she had only vaguely wondered who had been guilty. Her illness, which had cast an opaque screen over the events of that night was partly responsible for this. Now she stared at Sampson pointed a grimy finger at the two men.

"Stand up please," ordered Kellogg.

Crocker stood up, thin lipped, angry, defiant.

"That's him," the man declared. "You're excused Sampson," said Kellogg, "unless the district attorney wants you."

Anne glanced at the district attorney. He wore a baffled look, and shook his head, at which sign Sampson scurried from the room.

"I will now call Charlie White Deer."

The squat figure of a chinook was brought in. The man, visibly frightened, shrank from the quick gaze of eyes from every part of the court room.

"White Deer," began Kellogg kindly, "where were you on the night of August 3rd?"

"At . . . at bootleg fish trap."

"Were you alone?"

"Yes."

"Did you see the defendant; see this young lady?" He pointed to Anne. The answer was "yes."

"Did you see her fire a shot at Lee Farnsworth, the man who was killed?"

Surprisingly, there was no objection from the district attorney. He was listening avidly.

"No," said the Indian emphatically.

"Could you have seen her do it? I mean where was your boat in relation to hers?"

Phelan Suggests Earlier Practice

Seattle (AP).—Coach Jimmy Phelan of the University of Washington football team favors an earlier starting date for the opening of grid practice on the Pacific Coast. Under the present rules the season begins September 15, with conference games scheduled on the last Saturday in the month.

"Two weeks of drill before playing the first game of a schedule is not sufficient and proves too great a tax on the lads who play the game," Phelan said. "It is utterly impossible for a coach to condition a squad properly. The result is the boys battle when they are not set for their tasks."

SMART HUMAN RACE

Since first the human race began Man has extolled the works of man And boasted any time or place The glory of the human race.

Sometimes I wonder is it so? How much or little do we know? If clever folks we truly are, Why can't we learn to drive a car?

We've had the motor thirty years! Still by the death list which appears In daily papers, boldly set, We haven't learned to drive it yet.

Will man no progress ever make From honking horn and squealing brake? How long will he require to learn A safe and simple right-hand turn?

How long are papers to be filed With lists of all the maimed and killed? Must we suppose the human race Will always be its own disgrace?

At times when of my fellow-kind To boasting I have grown inclined, Always some crumpled motor car Gives proof how slow to learn we are.

Barrymore plays the part of a tyrannical, crusty old horticulturist, who, after death, returns to earth to right the wrongs he has committed as result of his persistent meddling in the lives of those about him.

Peter vainly attempts to communicate with his loved ones and to save them from disaster, and ultimately succeeds through the sensitiveness of a little child who had loved him in life.

Helen Mack is the foster child whose life he almost wrecks as a result of his attempt to force her into a marriage with his scamp of a nephew.

Edward Ellis portrays the character of Dr. MacPherson, friend and family physician. In a skillfully subtle manner he imparts his belief that the spirit of his dead friend is trying to send him a message from the Beyond.

George Breakston is the sick boy who falls under the control of Peter Grimm's spirit.

Allen Vincent is the renegade nephew and James Bush the young secretary whom Helen Mack loves. Donald Meek and Ethel Griffies, as the henpecked husband and his malicious, gossip wife, respectively, add comedy to the production.

Stalin Sees More Cultured Life Approaching for Soviet Citizens

Moscow, Nov. 19.—Soviet Russia, Joseph Stalin said Monday, has taken a "preparatory step" in its change from state socialism to communism.

He told 3,000 working men and women at the first national Stakhanovite congress in the Kremlin that their gathering was the "preparatory step."

Opening the Stakhanovite campaign, by which production is being increased through an enlargement of the individual worker's output, the soviet leader declared all citizens of the U. S. S. R. would have "welfare and a more cultured" life under the new scheme.

Karl Radek, political commentator, in an official interpretation of the speech in the newspaper Pravda, said:

"Stalin's words are a prediction that the time for this new life is coming and we shall live to see it."

Radek said Stalin was following in the footsteps of Nikolai Lenin. He pointed out Stalin had reminded his listeners of Lenin's statement food and other necessities would be distributed according to need, under communism.

The Stakhanovite system, called "rationalization of movements" for the more efficient use of tools, is being used in several factories and textile mills. It has met great opposition, however.

Several Stakhanovite workmen have been murdered, and others beaten. One person was sentenced to death for attempting to disrupt

Children's Colds Should Have This Safe Treatment

Young Mothers Benefit from Two Generations' Proof of This External Treatment For Fighting Colds.

IT AVOIDS CONSTANT "DOSING"

There's nothing like a child's cold to upset a young mother. And mothers of two generations, anxious to help end colds, have depended on Vicks VapoRub. It is effective—external—and safe. It avoids the risks of constant "dosing," so often upsetting to children's delicate digestions.

Just rubbed on throat and chest at bedtime, VapoRub acts two ways at once:

1. By stimulation through the skin, like a poultice or plaster—
2. By inhalation of its penetrating medicated vapors, released by body heat and breathed in direct to inflamed air-passages.

Continuing through the night, this combined vapor-poultice action loosens phlegm—soothes irritated membranes—eases difficult breathing—helps break congestion.

up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled out.
And it came to pass, when his master heard the words of his wife, which she spake unto him,
saying, After this manner did thy servant to me; that his wrath was kindled.

And Joseph's master took him,
and put him into the prison, a place where the king's prisoners
were bound: and he was there in the prison.

But the Lord was with Joseph,
and shewed him mercy, and gave him favour in the sight of the keeper of the prison.

And the keeper of the prison
committed to Joseph's hand all the prisoners that were in the prison;
and whatsoever they did there,
he was the doer of it.

The keeper of the prison looked
not to anything that was under his hand; because the Lord was
with him, and that which he did,
the Lord made it to prosper.—

Horse Thief Arrested: On Friday
a tramp, giving his name as John Harrison, was arrested by Charles Weaver, this side of Bendersville, having in his possession a horse and buggy belonging to William B. Mc-Ilhenny. Mr. McIlhenny had hitched
his horse and buggy on the Harrisburg road, this side of the Almshouse, while he went to look at some cattle in a field not far off belonging to Samuel Herbst. On returning the horse and buggy were missing. His first impression was that the horse had broken loose, but he subsequently learned that a man
had been seen driving the team in the direction of Bendersville. It seems that Harrison had quartered
at the almshouse on Thursday night,
and seeing the team as he was leaving Friday morning concluded to take possession of it. Mr. Weaver was returning home from Benders-
ville and meeting the team had his suspicions excited. He challenged the stranger for a trade, and while talking the matter over with him
made up his mind that the team
had been stolen, took possession of it, and brought Harrison to town.
He was committed to trial at January court.

Death of Mr. Wirt: The death of Mr. Adam Wert, of Mount Joy township, at a ripe old age, removes from our county one of its most intelligent, conscientious and upright citizens. He was born during the administration of President Washington and has lived under twenty-two presidents. From early manhood he took deep interest in and
was thoroughly informed on all public questions. He was among the earliest outspoken opponents of human slavery, and was a pronounced Abolitionist in the days when it was perilous and disgraceful to be identified with that proscribed company.
He was among the organizers of the Republican party in this county, and consistently supported its principles
and candidates.

Improvements: Messrs. Peter and John Kaiser are building a new house in Bonneauville for their mother.

Mr. Samuel Smith* of Mt. Pleasant township, is erecting a large two-story building to his home.

Rev. J. J. Gormley is having St.
Joseph's Catholic church at Bon-neauville greatly improved by having a new sacristy built at the back end and the old ones torn out of the church, repainting it, etc.

Plus Breighner has purchased a lot of ground from Chas. Robinson on Pitt street, for $160 cash, and will erect a house thereon in the spring.
Mr. Seright Wolf has purchased one-half acre of land, near Gitt's
mill of Henry Eichelberger for $110,
and is building a new dwelling.—

Woman's Styles

London (AP)—Modern women are torturing themselves with fashions
more painful and ludicrous than those affected by Chinese and Hot-tentots, says Dr. W. R. Inge, former
"Gloomy Dean" of St. Paul's Cathed-

"Look at the fashions!" he exclaimed. "The Chinese lady used to bind her feet, but the civilized western woman puts every organ of her body out of shape by high heels."

"The Hottentot lady prides her-

AN EVENT IN SPORT

I THINK we may safely say that the depression is now a thing of the past, and that we may confidently look to the future. The Dartmouth football team has beaten Yale! Dartmouth won after a period of 51 years of trying.

Boys attended, and graduated from Dartmouth, since that early initiation of such contests, back in 1884, and have since died with the hope of that victory unrealized. One of my boys attended and graduated from Dartmouth, and the other from Yale. Like the one at Dartmouth I faithfully and enthusiastically cheered for Dartmouth, and vowed I would until I died—until Dartmouth would win. All this to the disgust of the other boy who gloried in every Yale defeat of Dartmouth.

But now the clouds are parted. The jinx is dead! Dartmouth can beat Yale!

I know that this news may be of small import to many—outside of Dartmouth enthusiasts—but to the "fond father" of a twin boy combination, this was news de luxe! As a champion of "under dogs" I have lived to see the day when one of my favorites did win. From now on may equal glory go to Dartmouth and to Yale.

My friend Eddie Guest wrote an immortal little poem called: "It Couldn't Be Done—But He Did It." We need more rooters for the chap who says that he can do the job. There are a plenty who will always say that he can't.

Napoleon once said that everyone of his soldiers carried a marshal's baton within his knapsack. Likewise do we all carry within our hearts the will to win the thing we most desire.

For 51 years the football teams of Dartmouth set their hearts upon winning from Yale. For 51 years this luxury had been denied them. This year—though it had been said it couldn't be done—they did it!

There is a little lesson in this sporting event that we may all take to heart. The impossible belongs only to laggards and defeatists. God is on the side of the others.

Hollywood

Sights and Sounds

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood—Some stars enjoy a quick flight through the cinema
heavens and settle as quickly into obscurity. Others, like the brook and Warner Baxter, "go on forever."

Baxter has a year to go on his present starring contract, and already they are talking about tearing up that document and substituting another one for three years.
Because producers never give stars
contracts for sentimental reasons,
it would appear that they expect to make some money on future Baxter pictures.

Of course Warner is not a nonogenarian, nor has he been in pictures since the early flapper days.
He is 42, and his screen career dates from 1922, or 13 years ago. What makes his record remarkable is the fact that, except for the time about eight years ago when he was "all washed up," he has been a consistent, often a brilliant attraction.

How does it happen?
"It's a mystery to me," he replies. "In fact to me it's a miracle
how I've survived some of the bad pictures I've played in. Maybe it's because, just every so-often, I happen to be in a good one."

Had Long Wait

The "good ones," as Hollywood
rates them, have been such as "In Old Arizona" and "The Cisco Kid,"
"Forty-Second Street" and perhaps his latest, "Robin Hood and El Dorado," although that is not yet tested at the box-office. His role in "King of Burlesque" at present is reminiscent of that in "Forty-Second Street," which may be a good omen.

When Baxter finished his Paramount contract and was released,
he thought another contract would be easy, or at least that he could get plenty of work as a free-lance.
After months of waiting, he decided in desperation to accept a
"quickie" starring role on Poverty
Row. He knew it might mean the end of his film career, but $6,000
for six days' work was not to be overlooked. "Quickies" were scorned
more then than now.

A Rabbit Jump

Finally Edwin Carewe was convinced Baxter could play Alessandro in his "Ramona," but even that big role meant nothing to his future. Baxter was to learn how long "between pictures" could be. Of course, during this waiting, Raoul Walsh had approached him with the idea that he might use him in a Mexican heavy role for a picture
he was doing, and Warner built hopes on that thin prospect. When he learned that Walsh was going to play the role himself even that mania. Now he is essentially still the savage who fancies himself civilized. He calls himself Homo Sapiens—a title which he has done little to earn."

GIRL TRIED FOR KILLING FATHER

Mother of Virginia Young Woman Says Husband Was
"Roaring Drunk."

Wise, Va., Nov. 19 (AP)—Mrs.
Anne Maxwell, 50-year-old mother
of six children, Monday testified her husband, Trigg Maxwell, was "roaring drunk" the night his daughter,
Edith, is alleged to have killed him.

The mother, herself under indictment in the case, appeared in Wise
county court as a defense witness
for her 21-year-old daughter.

The prosecution rested late in the afternoon, and court adjourned until today following Mrs. Maxwell's testimony. Edith and her younger sister will take the stand, then.

Mrs. Maxwell said her husband, a blacksmith, attempted to whip Edith
the night he died in their mountain
cottage at Pound.

Tells of Blood

She said she saw the blood running down his forehead after the scuffle, but said she saw no blows struck. When her husband later fell against a meat block on the back porch, she said, she assumed this fall was responsible for his death.

The witness quoted her husband
as saying, after the scuffle, he was not badly hurt.

The mother and daughter are being tried separately.

Drinking Is Alleged

Mrs. Maxwell told her story of a family row unemotionally, but in detail.

Trigg was "roaring drunk," she said, when he came home at 10:30

the night of his death. He threatened to give his wife 30 minutes to leave the house the next morning,
she said.

"I seen he'd been drinking," the woman testified, "and so I said
nothing to him, just told him to go to bed." He did not go to bed, she said, but came to his wife later and asked where their daughter Edith was.

Hears Daughter Speak

"A man ought to take a club and break her neck—a man ought to kill her," Mrs. Maxwell quoted him as saying.

A few minutes later, Edith came in, and was told by her 11-year-old sister, Mary Catherine, that
"Daddy's going to run mother off."
Mrs. Maxwell said, and Edith tried to convince the younger girl that her mother would not leave her.

She was in bed, the woman said,
when she heard a scuffle between Trigg and his daughter. She heard Edith say, "Don't you stab me with that butcher knife."

Religion Causes
Change in Dates

Manteo, N. C. (AP)—Because religion is more important to them
than government, Dare county commissioners hold their meetings on a different date from the other 99
counties of the state.

All other commissioners meet the first Monday in every month. When Manteo was selected as county seat
in 1871, however, the only way for many commissioners to reach the town was by sailboat. In order to reach Manteo by Monday, it would have been necessary to leave home Saturday and spend Sunday on the waters—thus missing church services.

So the Dare county commissioners
set Tuesday after the first Monday
of every month at their meeting
time.

HUGE DRUM FOR FOOTBALL

Stillwater, Okla. (AP)—It looks as though it might be the largest bass
drum in the world, but Oklahoma

the largest in the nation. It mea-

hide covers each side. The company which made it told the school

the drum was the largest on record.
It will be featured at football games.

The culminating point of the Appennines, the Gran Sasso d'Italia
at Abbruzzi, is 9,560 feet high.

EVELYN HOEY TOOK OWN LIFE

Chester County Grand Jury
Returns Unanimous Verdict After Hearings.

West Chester, Pa., Nov. 19 (AP).—A Chester county grand jury after a week's investigation decided unanimously Monday that Evelyn Hoey,
blues singer of stage and screen,
committed suicide.

She was found shot to death on the night of September 11 in the farm home of Henry Huddleston Rogers 3d, son of the late Standard oil multi-millionaire.

Except for the mention of him as the owner of the house in which Miss Hoey died, the presentment
made no reference to Rogers nor to William J. Kelley, free lance movie camera man, who was his guest at the time.

One Member Drunk
The jury's report deplored "the fact" that one member of the coroner's jury was drunk and caused a delay in the inquest held last September, the week after the Broadway singer died. The coroner's jury reported then that Miss Hoey died
"at the hands of a person or persons unknown."

The grand jury said the association between certain members of the jury and news reporters was "too intimate," but "there was no corrupt
or criminal interference."

Presiding Judge W. Butler Win-
die received the presentment at 4:45
p. m., and excused the jury a few minutes later with the thanks of the court.

"Verdict Speaks For Itself"
J. Paul MacElre, of West Chester,
one of a battery of lawyers representing Rogers and Kelley, said "the verdict speaks for itself. It is what we have always contended an exclusive investigation would show."

The grand jury heard 24 witnesses
in its investigation of Miss Hoey's death. They included Rogers and Kelley, both voluntary witnesses.
They were held on technical charges
immediately after the singer's death,
but after the inquest their bond was cancelled and they were released in the custody of their lawyers.

jury they were in the living room of the farm home near Downingtown

when they heard the fatal shot.
Miss Hoey was found in Rogers'
second-floor bedroom, a bullet
through her head and a long-barreled, pearl-handled pistol at her side. Rogers and other witnesses acknowledged that a drinking party
preceded the tragedy.

Rogers attributed Miss Hoey's action to melancholia born of the belief her stage career was at an end.
He denied quarreling violently with her that day.

wick, his casual stroll into a Negro

Barwick cats and dogs, and swims

Wife, 14, Prepares to Defend Husband Held Her Kidnapper

Lewisburg, W. Va., Nov. 19 (AP).
—The child-wife of William Mavin Roman, 39, is prepared to defend him in his trial on a charge of kidnapping her eight years ago, threatening to kill herself if he is convicted.

The girl, 14-year-old Dorothy Bradlet Roman, took her two-year-old child and moved from her parents' home to the residence of her parents-in-law.

To Plead For Husband
County Prosecutor Samuel Price
said the girl told him she will go to the witness stand next Monday to testify she loves Roman and beg for his release.

The defense attorney, E. E. Easley, declared the girl went to live with Roman's parents because her father and mother insist on prosecuting him on the kidnapping charge. Roman is in the Greenbrier county jail, where he was placed
last summer on his return for the first time since he was indicted in 1928 on the abduction charge.

Easley said the prisoner probably is technically guilty of the charge
but added:

"I can't imagine any jury convict-ing Roman of this charge."

Living With Husband's People

"His young wife, embittered because her parents insist on prosecuting Roman, is living with Roman's people now and she has told me she would commit suicide if he is convicted."

The young mother was quoted by the prosecutor as saying Roman had treated her well and he carried her to many parts of the country, putting her into schools whenever possible while he earned a livelihood
doing odd jobs.

The case is to be called before Circuit Judge Summer H. Sharp and attorneys for both sides said they think the trial will proceed immediately.

Who Controls Advertising?

ADVERTISING has come to be a very necessary part of business.
It is very important to the public too, for it is the show window of American industry. By means of advertising it its various forms, business exhibits its wares to the public. Good advertising of good products means more sales and provides a helpful service to the consumer.

When advertising does not make a good impression it is disappointing to the advertiser as well as to the public. It it is not approved by its readers or listeners, advertising cannot be successful. There is nothing that an advertiser wants more than the good will of his customers and the general public. That is only good business.

Nearly all advertising is designed for the purpose of selling goods. Through this public channel, the advertiser tells you why he believes that you should buy his product. Instead of telling it to you privately, he has the whole world bear witness to his statements. By the very nature of things, he must be more careful in his advertised statements than in any private sales talk. False claims in advertising condemn the advertiser in the eyes of the whole public.

Of course there are some dishonest people in every field of human endeavor. But in advertising the faker is punished more swiftly than in other fields. Advertising is consorted daily by the public and your individual judgment helps to determine the verdicts handed down. You refuse to buy brands that are badly advertised. Advertisers put trade-marks on their products

to help you recognize the makes which you like and those you don't like. There is no excuse for getting fooled twice on a trademarked article.

This makes consumers the final authority on the rules of advertising practice.
Advertisers think of this when they prepare the advertisements which you see and hear. They sincerely desire that you approve their method of exhibiting merchandise for your purchase. Occasionally they make mistakes, and then they are promptly criticized.

By far the largest amount of advertising is on a high ethical plane. That is why the occasional exception is noticed by everyone. In the past thirty years, there has been a remarkable change in the character of advertising. It is amusing to look over the advertisements in newspapers and magazines of thirty years ago.
The statements made in those old ads
make us laugh today; we cannot see how anyone could have believed them. No advertiser would dare use that kind of copy
nowadays.

More than anything else, the influence
of public opinion has changed the style of advertising. Consumers appreciate sincerity and good taste and advertisers have recognized this. There is still room for further improvement just as there is room for improvement in every line of work. Advertising will continue to develop as it has
in the past, and the buying public is in control of the evolutionary process.

Consumers have found advertising useful to their own needs. With your help, it will continue to grow better and even more useful.

Reading for Fun

Children's Book Week
November 17-23 Is Being Observed Locally.

By MARY JANE SNYDER

Librarian Gettysburg High School
"Tom Sawyer," "Huckleberry Finn," the "Connecticut Yankee,"
"Puddin' head Wilson," the Prince and the Pauper" are real books.
During this week of "Reading for Fun," read them again. Not only children but parents and grandparents enjoy Mark Twain's gusty
humor, and deep wisdom.

This year the one hundredth anniversary of Mary Twain's birth is being celebrated by people all over the world as the Mark Twain Centennial. Last Sunday the New York public library opened an exhibition
commemorating this anniversary,
which will continue till April 15.
Except for a brief introduction to his boyhood, everything included relates either to his literary career or his published writings.

Another Mark Twain exhibition was opened last Thursday at the American Academy of Arts and Letters. It includes as well as manuscripts of several books and
items from his home in Hannibal, Missouri, the writing board on which he did all his writing up to 1900.

Next Tuesday, November 25, dinners will be held simultaneously in Bermuda, San Francisco, Honolulu
and New York, in all of which Twain lived and wrote. They will be linked by an international broadcast.

"Mark Twain's America," by Bernard DeVoto is one of the more recent of his biographies. Yet it is neither biography nor literary criticism, but rather both at once. Here one realizes how truly American are his characters, and why "Huck"
could never have been a Russian.
DeVoto believes that some of Twain's books attain a greatness which no
other American literature reaches.
Full of humor and irony, this volume stamps on the reader's mind
the conditions under which the great writer grew up.

Adversity and fortune smiled on him in the same breath, yet it was Twain's knowledge of the common folk of our country, and of the life
along the Mississippi, of which he later wrote, that has put him forever in the hearts of the American people.

Titles of books mentioned above:
"The Adventures of Tom Sawyer,"
"The Adventures of Huckleberry
Finn," "The Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," "The Prince
and the Pauper," "Life on the Mississippi."

Other Mark Twain books: "Joan of Arc," "Innocents Abroad," "The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County."

The word geyser comes from the Icelandic "geysir," meaning gusher
or rager.

DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:

A cleansing dose today; a smaller
quantity tomorrow; less each time,
until bowels need no help at all.

Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors
and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

If you knew what a doctor knows,
you would use only the liquid form.
A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief
from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.
It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that can form no
habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take regulated doses till Nature restores regularity.

Luther's Mid-West Speaking Trip
Brings Protests and Revocation

St. Paul, Nov. 19 (AP).—Criticism, which his mid-western trip has evoked here, moved Dr. Hans Luther, German ambassador to the United States, to remark Monday night: "I never before have faced
such a situation."

Business men at New Ulm, Minnesota, announced cancellation of his engagement to speak there Wednesday, and Jewish leaders in Minneapolis sought—unsuccessfully
—to have an engagement there today broken.

The New Ulm group said criticism
had caused them to terminate the speaking date.

But the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce association, of which Herbert J. Miller is president, confirmed the diplomat's engagement
to address it today though Jewish leaders had presented a petition
termining Luther's visit "an affront to all freedom-loving cities."

Doctor Luther, who said his tour
was unofficial, retorted "there are some people in the United States

who think differently on many things," in declining to reply to a question put him by Fred H. Weinberg, managing editor of the American Jewish World.

Weinberg asked: "How do you justify passage of the Nurnberg decrees?"

"You have picked a special case,"
he told Weinberg.

The Nurnberg decrees deny citizenship to Jews in Germany and bar their intermarriage with gentles.

At Madison, Wisconsin, Sunday
the envoy denied there had been persecutions of Jews and Catholics
in Germany when a group of University of Wisconsin students pressed him for answers to political questions.

PLAYED BY LONDON JUDGE

In a court trial famous in England as the "Chrysler shares case," Walter P. Chrysler (right), American motor car magnate, and Bernard E. Hutchinson, Chrysler official, were severely played by a jurist of the King's Bench division. The judge said some of Chrysler's answers during the case "show his standard of business morality lamentably low," and accused Hutchinson of not hesitating "to lie in what he considered to be the interests of the corporation." When Hanover and Gettysburg high school clash on the local football field Saturday afternoon it may be the final gridiron meeting between the arch rivals. Unless Hanover officials reconsider their announcement that all future Hanover high home games will be played at night it is almost a certainty that the Maroons will not meet Hanover next year.

BULLETS PREVENT EXPLOSION IN WRECK

Above is shown the burning wreckage of a gasoline tank train which ploughed into the station at Willard, Kas. Serious damage to the town was averted when one car, which did not burst in the wreck, was punctured by machine-gun bullets to prevent a terrific explosion. (Associated Press Photo)

New York.—If you would like to know the meaning of such theatrical terms as "gallery gods," "tormentors," "hoist the rag," "risley act," "razorback," "weed in the grass," and probably 26,000 others, you should get an interview with Barry Buchanan, who has spent three years compiling them in an encyclopedic dictionary of the amusement world.

Buchanan says he asked a 76-year-old circus man about the phrase "risley act," the circus term for all juggling acts in which the juggler lies on his back and manipulates the object with his feet. The 76-year-old referred him to a former performer aged 90 who told Buchanan it came from the name of the two men who first used it, Al and John Risley.

"Tormentors" is the name for the abutting scenery on each side of the stage which cloaks the entrance or exit of the actors. It was so named in the days of the old open air theatre when the actors, and actresses, changed costumes behind this barrier. It "tormented" the spectators not to be able to see this operation.

"Gallery gods" were the spectators in the old third balconies, now no more, who were almost mingling with the cherubs and the beautiful tinted clouds and sky of the ceiling.

"Hoist the rag" was a call made by the gallery gods when the curtain was not hoisted high enough to give them, from their lofty perches, a full view of the stage.

"Razorback," a descriptive title applied to all loaders with a circus, is a contraction of the foreman's cry "raise your backs" when the short show wagons of the old days were loaded on flat cars by manpower and worked into place by men lifting them from beneath.

"Weed in the grass" is the whisper which goes around a carnival when a cop is spotted in the crowd. It is a warning to pull no rough stuff.

Buchanan, when he began his lengthy task, thought 15,000 cards would index his findings easily, but now he has 26,000 cards and the end still isn't in sight. His rooms on Riverside drive are filled with cards, letters, old magazines.

Where is Lenore Ulric, dramatic actress who rose to her greatest heights under the late David Belasco? At her rural home in Harmon, New York, when she isn't at her town house on 72nd street, where she relaxes and rests in the century-old atmosphere of a house that was built during colonial days.

At the moment she is considering two plays, both leading roles of which are "bad girl" characters. The only fly in the ointment is the producer's fear the police may step in and close the show, which would mean a terrific loss.

But, Miss Ulric wouldn't mind that, except that she wouldn't want her friends to lose their money. She remembers that Mae West's show was closed and she was hailed into

KNOWING

Those We Serve
and Their Needs

When one of our patrons speaks of getting good service from this bank, what does he mean?

He means that our officers did not merely give him perfunctory attention. They took the time and the pains necessary to give him as nearly as possible the type of banking co-operation his needs of the moment called for.

That sounds simple enough. It is simple. But we could not do our best if we did not feel that we are daily performing a really helpful service for those who come to this bank.
